

ABSTRACT

An improved electroless copper plating bath solution comprising a stabilizer selected from the group consisting of formate salts and formic acid. The addition of the 5 formate salt or formic acid to the plating solution provides increased bath stability at the elevated operating conditions of the plating bath, preventing copper from spontaneously decomposing from the plating solution.